

Believes Liquor Export To The United States Constitutes Grave Peril

Ottawa.—Grave peril to the Dominion of Canada is involved in the continued export of liquor to the United States, declared Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, in the House of Commons, while crowded Court and galleries listened with close attention.

The prime minister's position in support of his bill to prohibit the issuance of liquor licences to cargo vessels of the United States, he said, was given more clearness, with-out exception, it is believed, in any committee where it now remains.

Quoted with the prime minister's assertion was the intimation that he would not be willing to assume the responsibility of the external affairs of the country in this respect unless it had been made a subject of parliament, or of the country, for any steps which he felt necessary to take.

"May I, my Speaker," declared the prime minister, "that so serious do I consider the situation to be, that I would no longer assume the responsibility in the matter of external affairs in this regard if I were not sure that I had the support of this house? I had the support of this house in any point of view, and I believe to be necessary to prevent a condition which might prove prejudicial to the country as well as falling the support of this parliament, the support of the people of Canada is a matter as grave as this."

He rose to speak in an atmosphere of intense expectation, and, in the course, long heralded, has been regarded as of major importance.

The galleries, which were generally but meagrely patronized, were crowded in a short time into the prime minister's box.

While Mr. Bennett supported the bill, Mr. French was in favour of an approval of the record of the government with respect to liquor-traffic. In his declaration of support to accept the view that there was something to fear from the United States.

"For one reason to be terrified," he said, "I become afraid of the United States, to be fearful because the prime minister enlarges up the ghosts of the memories of the past. There are no more," he declared with emphasis, "the proposed export of liquor to the United States, but it is a grave peril to the bill because it gave effect to a principle in which he had a profound conviction. And," he said, "it will lead to those who have different convictions the right to vote them in any of the future when opportunity arises and when money demands."

Mr. French declared that the prime minister and leader of the opposition. All were in favor of the bill with the exception of Mr. J. G. Power (Liberal, Quebec), who declared that he was in the bill because of the liquor traffic, or even silent acquiescence, he would be involved in launching the liquor hypocrisy. He believed the bill would be to increase bootlegging and to feed the liquor traffic against citizens of Canada by United States revenue officers.

"It can be continued in any way as a prohibition, or a temperance measure," declared Mr. French, "during the second reading of the bill. It is in my view to restrict the right of any citizen to purchase and consume alcoholic beverages as he may desire. The measure relates to smuggling. It might be described as a bill to assist in the prevention of smuggling, or an act to prevent the official consumption of smuggling on the part of Canadian officials."

Briand Takes Gloomy View

Head of French Naval Delegation Looks For Early Repeal

Of Conference

London, English.—A gloomy Briand, head of the French naval delegation, maintains that the five-power conference will not last but will be a failure.

French view is that a five-power treaty will result but a very technical questions amounting to a preliminary conference, which could be held a later League of Nations gathering to consider disarmament.

Briand was seriously gloomy when he left the conference at night.

He expressed the whole thing will be headed over to the delegates."

The long-term "disarmament" is the decisive point of the conference. It has not been reached and it is not likely to be reached.

France's insistence that her figure cannot be seriously reduced in this connection, Mr. MacDonald has great faith in M. Briand's power to effect a compromise which will lead to a reduction.

But M. Briand, it is said, will not be able to do anything but reduce the number of French chambers.

He said that the conference does not want to see the situation of France, even if she does persist in her present position.

Mr. MacDonald, however, is not a pessimist. He believes that the five-power conference will be a success.

Glowing Future For Canada

Produced By Official Of French Community

A glowing future for Canada is foreseen by Maurice Tillier, of Paris, France, managing director of the French Steamship Line. He is engaged in the future of the country is so brilliant that he has just inaugurated a new north Pacific service with Vancouver as the land port, and, on a visit to Ottawa, after a month's tour of this continent.

The traffic service running via Los Angeles and the Panama Canal to Havre, France, involves expenditure of a great many millions of dollars, Mr. Tillier said. The magnitude of the fleet of eleven ships of the S.N. Wharfedale, largest ship of its class, is under Vancouver harbor, said, on a visit to Ottawa, after a month's tour of this continent.

Has Become Important

Glycine Is Polyan's New Only Modern Sport

"That clever head of Glycine, the Baiter," said the insurance man rather haughtily at the club luncheon. Poor old Glycine, who never had any "lookers-on" for the London Daily Chronicle. Indeed, we threw doubt upon the existence of such a person. Yet he declared he had been efficient in connection with Glycine for some time past. We looked it up in the Gazette. No mention of it. "He must have been the Polyan name for the Glycine, which is Galsani, and got confused," we said. Yet next day he turned up with cutting about Glycine from a shipping paper. Five years ago it was a fishing village of 300 inhabitants. Now it is a fully equipped modern resort. It is Polyan's only town. That is why they have been so quick about making it.

A Prayer For Motorists

The Christian Republic gives the Prayer for Motorists.

"Teach us to drive through life without sliding into other people's lives. Preserve our brains tight when we may stop before we go too far. Help us to bear the brunt of our own motor and lose our own eyes to the clashing of other people's. Keep steady in our racing and out of trouble. Abolish us from the means of trying to pass the other motorist, as a motorist, and keep our eyes to the traffic signs, and keep our feet on the brakes."

Not Little To Change
